

Providence
Health Care

How you want to be treated.

Allied Health New Graduate Program

Launch your health care career with us

Providence Health Care is one of Canada's largest faith-based health care organizations. We operate 18 healthcare sites across B.C., including St. Paul's Hospital – the province's leading tertiary and only quaternary cardiac program.

At Providence, we believe in empowering the next generation of health care professionals. We know that making the transition from student to confident professional can be an exciting and, at times, challenging journey. That's why our New Graduate Program - Allied Health is designed to support you every step of the way. As a new graduate at Providence, you will be making a difference in the lives of patients and their families, while being supported by our community of experienced and compassionate professionals.

New graduate program

Our program currently supports new graduates in the following fields with expansion into other disciplines currently underway.

- Registered Dietitians
- Occupational Therapists
- Physiotherapists
- Social Workers
- Speech-Language Pathologists
- Respiratory Therapists

What we offer

Personalized mentorship

- Strengthen your confidence and skills with one-to-one guidance from an experienced practice educators in your discipline.
- Receive real-time support with regular feedback, chart reviews, and hands-on mentorship to help you succeed every step of the way.

Growth and development

- Participate in interdisciplinary workshops on essential topics to build clinical skills.
- Enjoy protected time to focus on learning.

Connections and impact

- Network with peers across allied health disciplines to build lasting relationships.
- Explore opportunities to grow within Providence and make an impact in health care.

More Information

For more information on the New Graduate Program scan the QR code or visit our website.

